On the British home front in 1943, Anna Herberts loses her beloved grandmother to Nazi bombs. Months later, she is reunited with her best friend's brother, Cameron Jenkins, home on leave. When shadows from his past catch up with him, Cameron is forced to entrust Anna with his deepest secret — for four years he has been a spy in a secret government intelligence agency.

Eager to avenge her grandmother and help end the war, Anna undergoes para-military training and joins Cameron with the French Resistance behind enemy lines. Together they are pushed to their very limits as they grapple with the high cost of shadow warfare and fight for freedom.
